The value of vaccines

England is a world leader in vaccinations, with one of the most comprehensive programmes in the world. Evidence from Public Health England (PHE) surveys suggests that parental confidence in the national immunisation programme is at an all-time high, and that parents/carers are far more likely to trust the NHS and their healthcare professional than what they see on social media.

Key points about vaccines

- Vaccines save lives. After clean water, vaccination is the most effective public health intervention in the world.
- Vaccines stop the spread of disease. Even with better hygiene, sanitation and access to safe water, infections still exist. When people are not vaccinated, infectious diseases that usually we no longer see can quickly spread.
- Vaccines prevent between 2-3 million deaths globally per year. But, if global vaccination coverage improved, this could increase by 1.5 million.
- Vaccines help fight antimicrobial resistance. Vaccination stops humans from getting infected, reducing the use of antibiotics and the development of resistance.
- Vaccines are the only way to eradicate disease. We have eradicated smallpox and are near to eradicating polio, both through using vaccines.
- Vaccines protect you and those around you. If enough people get vaccinated against a disease it makes it harder for the disease to spread. This protects people who can't get vaccinated, such as newborn babies.

Safer Internet Day – 9th Feb

With many children and young people spending hours online every day, it's essential for families to be open and informed about internet safety.
